On 30 June 1953, two furnaces of the gypsum sulphuric acid plant of Farbenfabrik, WGB, Wolfen were scheduled to be put into operation as a first stage with a monthly production of 2,000 tons. This date was postponed to 3 August 1953 for safety reasons. Source stated that mainly the synthetic materials industry would be affected by the resulting shortage of about 4,000 tons of sulphuric acid.
